discovery . . .

foreword

The experiences of the Christian's life are a discovery of faith, of Christian community, of self, and of the world. A thorough integration of these experiences brings purpose and wholesome fulfillment to life.

At C.M.B.C. we are challenged to find the foundation of our faith, the meaning of Christian fellowship, the value of knowing ourselves, and our response to the world of persons.

C.M.B.C. is a place of discovery.

God gave purpose to his people by interacting with them in history. This interaction is faith. We, too, participate in the dialogue of faith as we encounter God in our lives, particularly in worship and biblical studies.

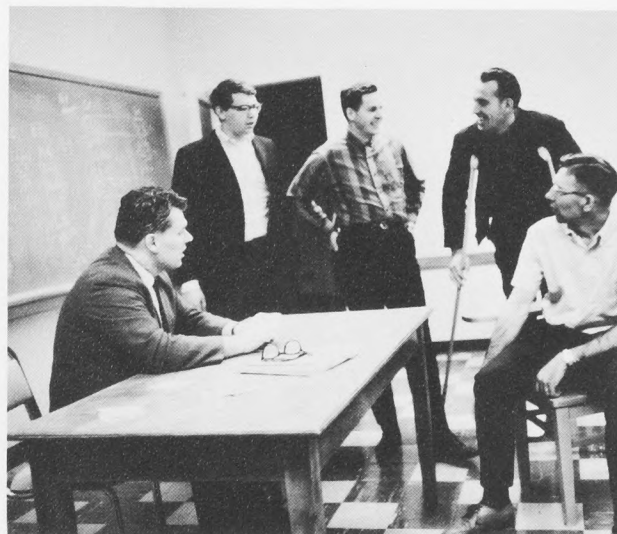

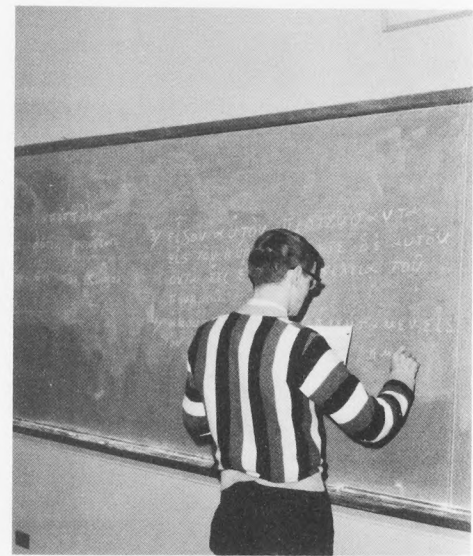

Faith gives us the necessary security to venture into the future with anticipation.

Bible Week

Rev. John Esau of Minneapolis presented a series of lectures on the Apocalypse of John.

Each student was responsible for his own Prayer Day. For many it was a withdrawal for evaluation and introspection.

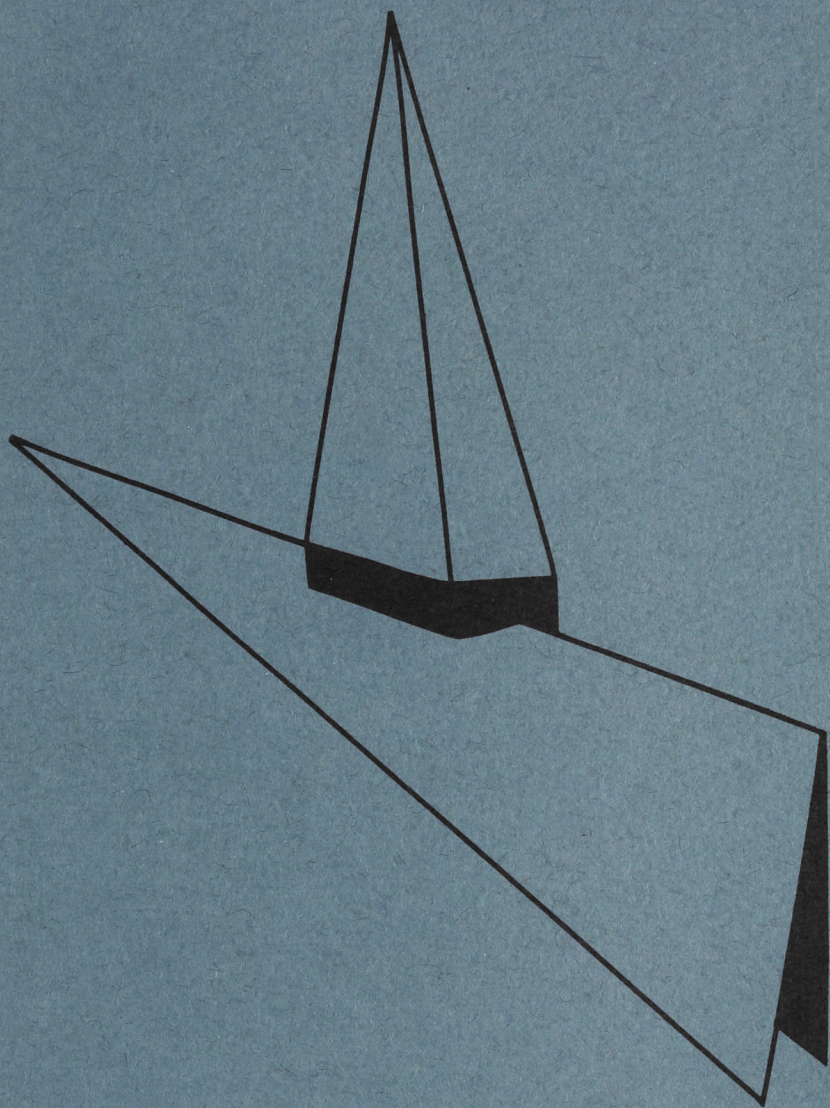

The oratorio choir performed two works, Bach's Weihnacht's Oratorium and Brahms's Requiem. The latter was a joint effort with MBBC.

community

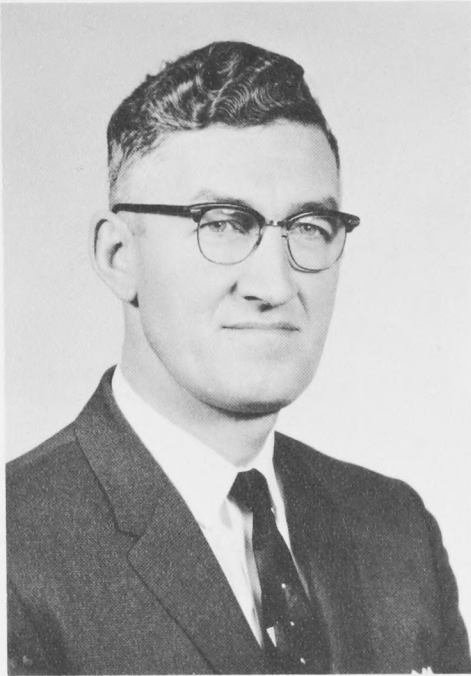

Community becomes dynamic as we live together, studying, socializing and sharing in discussions. The encounter between students and faculty and staff enriches and adds new dimensions to student life. Furthermore, the community is a testing ground to examine the authenticity of our witness, be it word or act.

The C.M.B.C. community is part of a larger community, the constituency. Through exchanges both college and constituency gain perspective on their roles.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

There is something thrilling about making discoveries. All of us remember the stories we read about explorers who went into the unknown and discovered new lands, treasures and peoples. With them we too had new vistas opened to us.

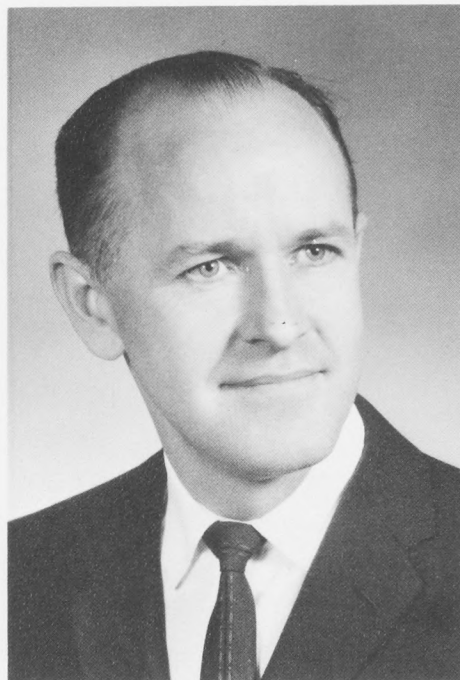

The student who moves out into the world and whose particular chapter of the world includes C.M.B.C. makes his discoveries too. Faith can take on a new and living dimension and a sense of community can grow out of the family context which has become so meaningful here.

The discovery of self is a further vista that opens to the student in the academic setting. This may be both a frustrating and encouraging experience, yet one that must come for anyone to relate meaningfully to his Creator, to his Lord and to his fellow man.

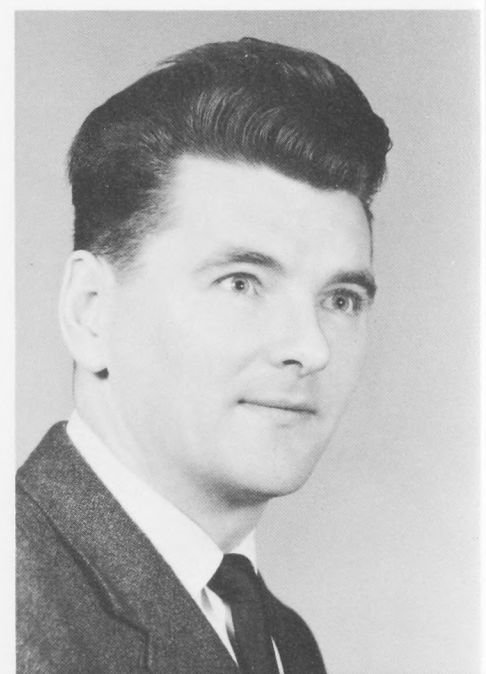

You, the reader, are invited to make your own discoveries as you browse through these pages.

Student Service

Apart from the routine of classes and studies, students give a portion of their time each week to service. As we become engaged in Christian service we must become involved with our whole being and speak to the total needs of the individual.

We express our love and concern for the individual in visitations, teaching, and personal relationships.

The concern group organized to study the church community in history: their findings they shared with various church groups.

Ministers and laymen attended two weeks of special courses at college.

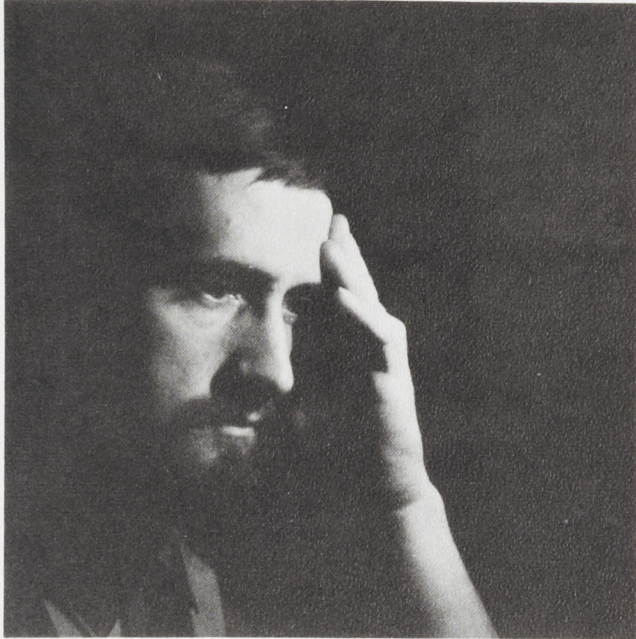

self

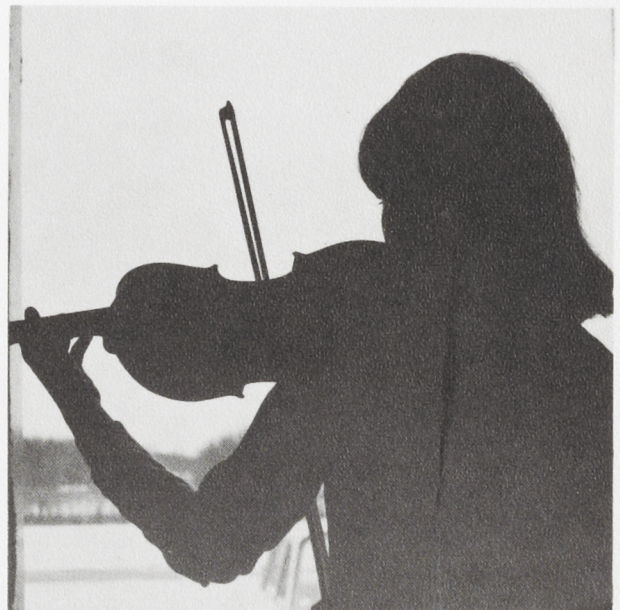

As we participate in worship, academic studies, social activities and service opportunities we continually seek to identify ourselves in relationship to those around us. Integrating our identities in experiences and activities into a unified whole is an integral part of maturing.

In the need to define who we are, we give expressions to ourselves and our ideas. Self expressions in art, music, speech, and writing enrich life.

first year

ERWIN WARKENTIN
Saskatoon, Sask.

In our college life, our encounter with ideas and situations causes us to examine our beliefs critically. At times we must probe to the very basis, or foundation, of the beliefs which we have been taught, only to find that we actually have no firm base to stand on.

Once we have established a solid foundation, we can rebuild our beliefs; the result is a stronger and more stable Christian faith.

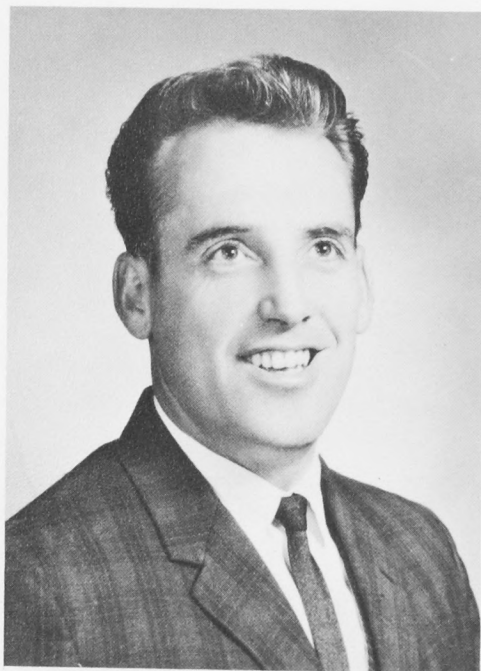

Only when we are made aware of what we really believe, and why we believe it, do we become individuals.

Erwin Warkentin

Bachelor of Christian Education

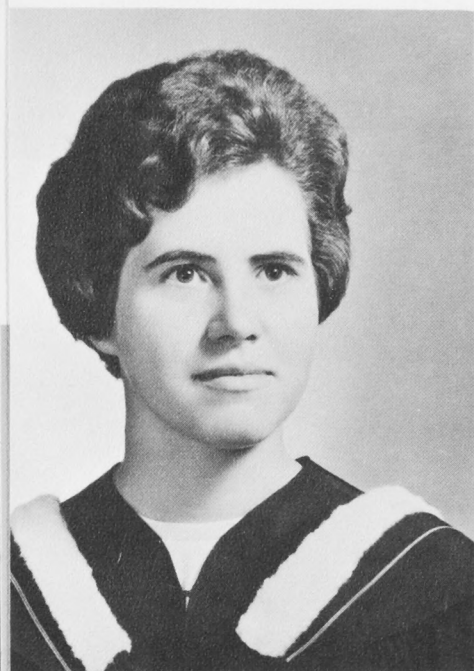

Dear God:

I want to thank you for three years of discovery.

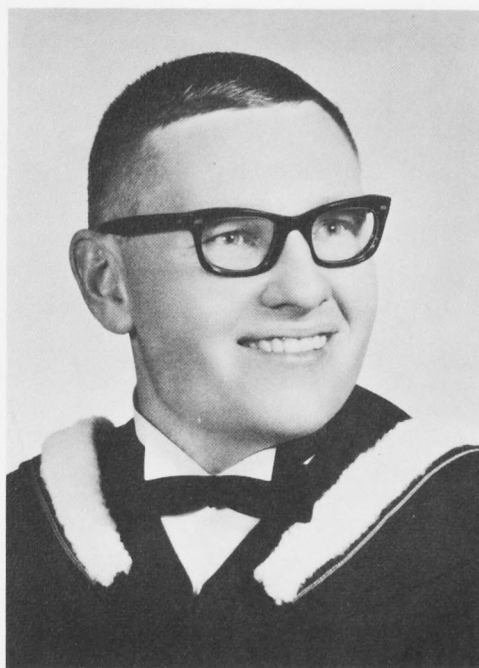

I remember the insecure but expectant person who entered the door of this school such a long time ago. I remember the first year of conflict and adjustment, the second year of growing awe and inspiration as exciting realms of the old and new became a part of my experience. I am indeed grateful for the third year in which the jumbled complex of encounters began to shape itself into meaning. I thank you for the school which has helped me find my personhood by seeking with other persons in your presence. Grant me the grace to live my discoveries in the future.

Amen.

C.M.B.C. gives us the opportunity to discover the world and its needs. Service opportunities afford one situation in which to translate our knowledge into practice.

Discovering our faith, the community and ourselves equips us more fully to meet the physical and spiritual needs of mankind.

A day of service at Loon Straits, Matheson Island and Manigotogan helped students gain insight to the work of Mennonite Pioneer Mission.

Student Service

The unifying factor of all Christians is the church. The fellowship of believers supports the Christian facing the encounters and challenges of the world.

A number of students have served within the churches. By serving in the church we created our roles in it.

A "big sister" spends an evening with her "little sister".

Work with mute children

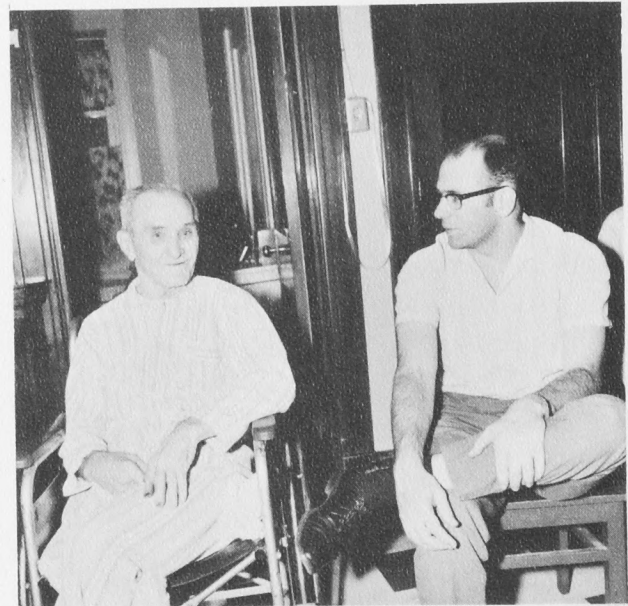

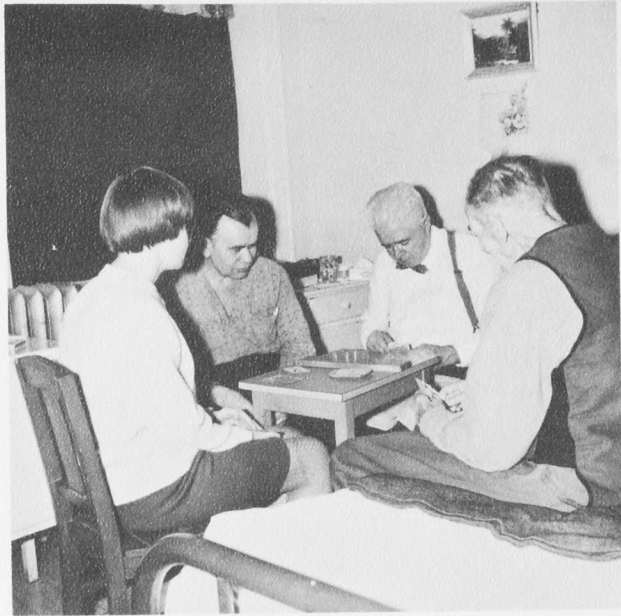

Hospital visitations at the Rehabilitation Centre and the Municipal Hospitals consist of singing to and conversing with the patients.

Students serve by visiting informally with the aged at the Bethania Nursing Home.

Under the direction of Rev. McCullough, the Protestant chaplain of Stony Mountain Penitentiary, the students have participated in the chapel life of the inmates.

Children's work often involves patience and commitment.

Tutoring and socializing at the Y.O.U. helps to develop personal friendships.
